Fly along with Canada's CF-100 and CF-101 crews as they maintain combat-readiness during the uncertain days of the Cold War in Night Fighters: Stories from the Flyers of Canada's All-Weather Fighter Force Canada and Europe 1953 to 1984, compiled by John Eggenberger, Bob Merrick, and Doug Munro.

The vignettes range from the sublime to the ridiculous in this banquet of true stories told by those who watched over Canada's and NATO's airspace during the crucial years of the Cold War. Whether scrambling to intercept a "Bear", taking part in realistic exercises to maintain their combat readiness, flying in the daily training adventures, or thrilling airshow crowds with thunderous formation displays, these flyers were constantly honing their arcane skills. But, there were always the fun times, friends and laughter.
